Mormons v. Secretary of the Interior; Corporation of the presiding bishop of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter-day Saints v. Hon. Donald P. Hodel, Secretary of the Interior, et al., in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia: Memorandum and Court Order, filed 30 May 1986, 39+1p, mimeo, n.p., n.d. (The full cite for this case its appeal path through the U.S. Article III courts is: 265 U.S. App. D.C. 226, 830 F.2d 374 (1987), cert. denied, 486 U.S. 1015, 100 L. Ed. 2d 214, 108 S. Ct. 1752. In the words of the D.C. court: “This case involves the Mormon Church, title to land that has been in dispute since the turn of the century, and the Fa’a Samoa—the Samoan way of thinking and doing.” Plaintiff church was deprived of its land by order of the High Court of American Samoa. It is noteworthy that the latter court is neither a constitutional Article III court, nor a legislatively-created court. It was originally a creation of the navy commander who opened the first American coaling station in Pago Pago in 1900. In 1951 the Secretary of the Interior succeeded the Secretary of the Navy as the person charged by the U.S. President with the administration of law and... justice in the territory, and thus with the supervision of the High Court. Using the only “appeal process” available from that court, Plaintiff in the above case requested review and reversal by the Secretary of the Interior, who by executive order is responsible for all civil, military and judicial authority in the territory. The secretary declined to overrule the Samoan court; hence the suit against the Secretary in his official domicile, the District of Columbia, in the District Court for the District of Columbia. This is the only avenue for judicial review open to the residents of American Samoa, and is an artifact of judicial precedent rather than statute. The effect of the case was to reaffirm the view of the U.S. courts that territories are not entitled to Article III courts under the constitution, and must make do with whatever judicial process is accorded to them by the U.S. Government acting through the Secretary of the Interior. Cf. Laughlin, Stanley K., _The Law of the United States Territories & Affiliated Jurisdictions_, n.p., Lawyers Coop., 1995, pp. 219–223.)
